and Clark 100 years ago, for nature did the work before man arrived on the scene, and all the builders of the fair had to do was to put on a few finishing touches. The buildings are nestled at the base of the foothills of the Cascade range. The site embraces a natural park and a lake, which together cover 406 acres. The principal buildings are on a slight elevation, and termees extend from them to the lake.

One may see in the distance the grand works of Mother Nature, the snow capped peaks of lofty mountains outlined against the blue sky; the Wir lamette river threads its course near by, and a glimpse may be had of the markling waters of the Columbia. The western world's fair, as this ex

Another work of sculpture of historic significance stands in Portland's city park and is entitled "The Coming of the White Man." It portrays an Indian chief and a young brave and is by the noted New York sculptor Herman A. MacNeil, whose success in the handling of Indian subjects is well known. The young brave welcomes the white men, whose canoes have been discerned around the bend in the river, but the aged chief, with more prophetic eye, gives them a sullen and defiant greeting.

Owing to the high rates of exchange due to unsettled conditions in Venezuela it is difficult to get Venezuelan money converted into United States money, and Mr. Loomis says that to get Venezuelan money he had in a bank turned Into American legal tender he exchanged checks at the posted United States government rates, giving a check equivalent to that which he received. Secretary Taft of the war department is investigating the matter.

Mr. Loomis was born in Marietta, O., n 1861 and in 1883 was graduated in 1861 and in 1883 was graduated held on the Pacific coast or west of from Marietta college. For several years he was on the staff of a New York daily paper. President Harrison made him consul at St. Etienne, France, and while there he wrote reexplorers a century ago, is intended to ports on commercial conditions which attracted much attention. On his return from France in 1893 he became editor in chief of the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune. Last summer while recovering from ill-Inflammatory Rheumatism in the knees, from which I was unable to leave my room for several months. I was treated by two doctors and also tried different kinds of linaments and medicines which seemed to relieve me from pain for awhile, but at the same time I was not any nearer getting well. One day while reading a paper I saw an advertisement of S. S. S. for Rheumatism. I decided to give it a trial, which I did at once, After I had taken three bottles I felt a great deal better, and I still continued to take it regularly until I was entirely any one suffering from Rheumatism. 9
